From the Bishop

*Return to God with all your heart, the source of grace and mercy;
Come seek the tender faithfulness of God.*

--Marty Haugen

Dear Friends in Christ,

Eighty-two years ago, on February 19, 1942, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt signed Executive Order 9066 that authorized moving 110,000 Japanese Americans with full US citizenship and legal Japanese immigrants from their homes and placing them in remote internment camps. This action took place three months after the Japanese Imperial government bombed Pearl Harbor, which led to all Japanese Americans being looked at with suspicion and classified as 'enemy aliens'.

The first 300 Japanese Americans in the country to be moved were residents of Bainbridge Island, among them Mrs. Shigeho Kitamoto and her four children (pictured in photo), who had all been born in the United States. Each person could take only one small suitcase. They were transported by military guard first to the Washington State Fairgrounds in Puyallup, where they lived for a time in barracks and horse stalls.

Then they were moved to the Minidoka War Relocation Center near Twin Falls, Idaho, where over the coming months, 13,000 Japanese American residents of Washington State would join them, including the entire membership of the Seattle Japanese Methodist Episcopal Church. Three years later they were released, only to discover that most of their homes, businesses and farms had been permanently taken over by others.

During this same time period in the early 1940's, the United States denied entrance visas to Jewish refugee families who were fleeing the Holocaust in Europe. Among those denied visas were Anne Frank and her family in Amsterdam. In the pre-war years, a number of Jewish Europeans were involved in the labor movement and also in the resistance movement to the Nazi takeover. Consequently, prominent political leaders in the US labeled Jewish people as being "prone to violence" and "potential terrorists". This was part of the wider anti-Semitism that existed throughout America.

It was also in this time period that African Americans were excluded from an event of honor in American society. Following the Berlin Olympic games in 1936, President Roosevelt invited to the White House for congratulations all the US Olympic medal winners. However, the twelve black US Olympic medal winners were not invited to the White House, including Jesse Owens, who won a record-breaking four gold medals. President Roosevelt failed even to send a congratulatory letter to Mr. Owens, because, as his aides said, "he was just too busy."

Past events open our eyes to present realities. In our fear and suspicion, we regularly see and label entire groups of people as dangerous enemies. Walking down the street, we see a person of another color or culture walking towards us and we begin to anxiously imagine what they might do to us. We "pre-judge" them before we even know who they are, which is what "prejudice" is. What we feel individually gets fed and intensified by the comments and media swirling around us. Every day we read in the paper about a mosque or synagogue being defaced and a person of color being insulted, attacked or shot. Yet, the attackers will cite the danger and threat of the ones they attacked.

In our Christian faith tradition, we set aside the forty days of Lent as a time of reflection and repentance. To repent means to turn back to God and to follow the Way of Christ. I believe that in the season of Lent we are now in, it is important for us not only to reflect on our own personal spiritual path, but also to examine how our whole society is caught in patterns of fear, judgment and violence towards others. Once again, entire ethnic communities are labeled dangerous enemies. Once again, refugees fleeing persecution and death are denied entrance. Once again, people of color are being excluded and un-recognized for their gifts.

This time of slander, attack and separation must end. A new time of honesty and reconciliation must begin. As St. Paul said to Ephesians, "Let us speak the truth to our neighbor, for we are members of one another." Ephesians 4:24

It is by grace – God's free gift of life and love – that we are united with God. It is by that same grace that we are united with one another more deeply than we know. I pray that Lent will be a time of healing for our torn hearts and reconciliation in our shattered communities.

*Return to God with all your heart, the source of grace and mercy;
Come seek the tender faithfulness of God.*

In Christ,
Bishop Rick Jaech
